Global Trends - Beverages

A Burgundy from SUSSEX?

- Pinot noir grapes now account for 22 per cent of UK vine plantings, second only to Chardonnay
- Around five million bottles of wine are produced in England and Wales each year
- Wine buffs even say pinot noir is perfectly suited to England's soil and climate

Click here to read more

Other Wine Producing Countries

Mexico: Legislation for the promotion of the wine industry is presented

With the objective of promoting and disseminating activities related to the development of the Mexican wine sector, the "General Law for Promotion of the Wine Industry Initiative" was presented in the Senate of the Republic.

In accordance with the Federal Law of Sustainable Rural Development this is to promote greater productivity and competitiveness in the domestic market.

According to a statement, the legislative project proposes the definition of "Mexican Wine" as the product 100 percent of grapes planted, grown and harvested of Mexican origin that will be fermented and packaged in its entirety in Mexican territory.

In 2015 the production was almost of 20 million liters, according to data from the Mexican Wine Council A.C. and the International Organization of Vine and Wine, with an annual growth in consumption of 8% between 2013 and 2016.

Click here to read more